With a boat ready to set sail into retirement, they stayed instead & saved 100s of teens

This Hallmark Channel original movie tells the remarkable true story of couple Doug and Robbie Smith, who founded the Safe Harbor Home for Boys in Jacksonville, Fla.

On the eve of their retirement cruise to luxury, self-made millionaire Doug Smith and psychologist wife Robbie get a call from Doug's past asking him to "pay it forward" by helping out troubled teens for a brief stay on their boat. A local judge (Orson Bean of "Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman"), who took mercy on a young Doug when he was in trouble with police, asks the couple to put off their trip to help spare three teens from serving prison time with veteran criminals.

Through hard work, discipline, and the calm and confidence gained by a challenging life at sea under Doug and Robbie's guidance, the boys turn their lives around. In return, the couple finds a renewed sense of purpose and calling for their twilight years.

"Phenomenal...The first time we saw it—we had to pause it...We still can't watch it without crying. The stories are real."

—Doug Smith

(portrayed in the film by actor Treat Williams)

"Very, very pleased...I had no idea—I didn't think my life could be made exciting."

—Robbie Smith

(portrayed in the film by actress Nancy Travis)
